Moments of Awareness

What constitutes a city? What constitutes a city district.

How does life in one part of the city change? And what sort of image do we form of it? Who are the people who make up the city and how is the city shaped by them? The environment and the people living in it interact, interactions that can range from the private to the social to the political. The artistic framework places environment and people into another context – this allows for reflection on the given situation, which in turn can alter precisely that very situation: how is the environment mirrored in a work of art for the viewer – an environment that the viewer thinks he knows – and what sort of insights result from this? The analysis of contemporary society in turn raises questions concerning the society of the future.
